

Peter Latak <peterlatak@gmail.com>

Wind farms

Howard Ferguson <howard.ferguson@maspin-house.co.uk>9. augusta 2010 17:22

Komu: peterlatak@gmail.com

Here in England for every wind farm there is a large group of local residents who are opposed to the development. People do not want to live next to wind turbines for a variety of reasons. They also are concerned that the cost of power produced by wind turbines is greater than by other means, especially nuclear power.

However the main concern they have is that the turbines will totally alter the character of the area in which they live. Instead of rural countryside it will become a large industrial development. The turbines are also noisy and people living within 2km are likely to hear the turbines those nearer than 1 km are likely to suffer serious problems due to the noise disturbing their sleep. The problem is worse in summer when windows are open at night.

To see the effort that people put into fighting these plans see our website at www.stopwoodlanewindfarm.co.uk

Our website is visited by people from all over the world. Wind farms are universally unpopular.
